Clip It Up with Baby Light & Clip® June 4, 2008

I've done it while my boys are in the tub. I've done it while my boys are sleeping. I've done it while they're drinking a bottle or sippy cup. I've done it with Baby Einstein or Star Wars playing in the background. I've even done it while my boys are being fed, nice and relaxed. And still, I could never perfect the art of clipping my babies' nails. It actually became something I dreaded.

But now there's (finally) Baby Light & Clip, a lighted nail clipper... and nail clipping is no longer met with sheer terror in my home. Where was this 3 years ago? I would have saved William so many tears! This nail clipper actually illuminates the fingertips and toenails, showing the part of your baby's nail that needs to be trimmed. And there are safety guards that help you avoid nicking your baby's skin. Plus, there is a handy compartment that keeps the cut clippings from falling on the ground, or worse, onto baby.

Clipping a baby's nails is one job that no mama wants to mess up. Unfortunately, I learned that the hard way (over and over again). But the Baby Light & Clip makes it easy all around. I even use it on my older boys. And when Henry arrives in two weeks, I will be ready - and fearless! - to use the clippers on him, too.
